

Multigenerational Christmas at Augustana Home

The energies of Christmas past and Christmas present came together during the holiday season this year when students from Public School 127, 7805 7th Avenue, visited the Augustana Home for the Aged, 1680 60th Street.

At their annual visit, students in Rudy Passaro's fifth grade class sang Christmas carols for the appreciative seniors, several of whom joined in.

Following the performance, the children came into the audience, much to the delight of the residents.

Afterwards, gifts brought by the children were distributed to the seniors.

Representatives from the school have been making their trip for six years now, and intend to return next Christmas.

Augustana resident Hannah Andersen joins the children in singing. Andersen, 103 years old, is joined by Agnes Tharaldsen from the Home.

Rudy Passaro, who teaches the class, led the children in singing "Frosty the Snowman."

Students from P.S. 127 prepare to sing Christmas carols for senior citizens at the Augustana Home for the Aged.

Photos by Craig McGuire